Through November 15

Since 25 October, LA-based artist Kiersten Puusemp has been traveling the globe in hopes of reaching an unspecified location in the middle of the Indian Ocean, a site located at the polar opposite of The Box's gallery site. While this exhibition largely relies on the performative duration of Puusemp's voyage, it is also the maximum physical distance of artist from "home" that defines the work in this show. A common desire to run away from home also lingers heavily around this action. The gallery will host a reception with the artist on the exhibition's closing day.
